CHAPLINE STREET CURBING.—The property owners residing on Chapline street, between 11th and 12th streets, recently had a conflict with the city authorities in relation to the manner in which the curbing had been set, complaining that it was several inches higher upon one side of the street than upon the other. Yesterday afternoon the Council Committee on Streets and Alleys examined the curb, and satisfied the complaining citizens by ordering the curb on the east side lowered five inches and that on the west side raised four inches.

SALE OF THE WAGENENECHT DAIRY,-SALE OF THE WAGENENECHT DAILY.—
Mr. W. P. Hubbard, special commissioner, yesterday sold at public auction the OPERA HOUSE LOAPERS,-The patrons OTHER HOUSE LOAVERS.—The patrons of the Opera House have for a long time been annoyed by the crowd of loafers who congregate about the entrance to the building, and we are glad to see that the management has undertaken to break up the nuisance. Last night a policeman was stationed in front of the building, and compelled all to "move on" who loitered in the vicinity. We hope that the change may be a permanent one.

VAMOUSED.—The proprietor of a pret-zel foundry in Centre Wheeling has left the city "and a number of creditors" for parts unknown. He is supposed either to have gone to the Sandwich Islands, to to have gone to the Sandwich Islands, to bore holes in sponges for a sponge facto-ry, or to New York to blow bladders for a snuff factory. He, it is surely known, will not soon be forgotten by a large num-ber of Wheeling acquaintances.

PATENT STEAM COVERING.—Upon the arrival of the steamer Fanchon at the wharf yesterday, Mr. Joseph Hamilton went aboard and covered the steam pipes and steam drum with the patent steam covering for which he is the agent. This covering is the same as that upon the steam pipes at the Penitentiary, recently put on by Mr. Hamilton.

Some years before this vase was made, a smaller vase, holding seven gallons, was made by the Messra, Sweeney, and presented to Henry Clay, and is now in the possession of the lietrs of the great Kentucky statesman. "Kenny Gow."—The play of "Kerry Gow," as performed in the Opera House last evening, is one of the best plays belonging to the class called frish, that we remember seeing. All of its surroundings remember seeing. All of its surroundings are picturesque and natural, the characters are boldly and skillfully drawn, and there is no attempt to elevate the central figure so high as to dwarf the subordinate parts, a lesson which too many cotemporaneous dramatists have yet to learn. Mr. Murphy is afforded an excellent opportunity, of which he fully avails himself, to prove that he is one of the neatest Iriah comedians on the boards. He has a splendid physique; his enunciation is at all times clear and distinct; his brogue is of the purest, and is never forgotten, and he is droll at times to a side-splitting degree. He presents the humorous side of Irish character in a manner peculiarly his own, and with much less of exaggeration than many Irish comedians exhibit.

Soon everything was in readiness and the wedding company, consisting of Edwin J. Viokers and Miss Emma Hewetson as attendants, with a few relatives, arranged themospherical three of the officiating minister, Kev. S. B. Barnit, of the 16th Street Eng. Lutheran Church. The wedding ceremony was the beautiful form of the Lutheran Church, which, when read with full deep voice, is very impressive. A few moments more and the 'Amen' was spoken which made two hearts one.

Congrahulations followed and the parties again entered the carriages and took their departure for home, where a hand, some reception and wedding supper awaited them. The dress of the bride was a grey silk, elaborately but very tastefully trimmed with fringe and folds of the same material as the dress. The bride have a velvet, assimilating the toolor of the dress, with an elegant willow to find the wharf yesterday as usual, and left to follow of the dress, with an elegant willow. and thousands of means for enjoymen We can desire no better when in perfec
